

Becoming an Employer of Choice

Employers need the best people on their teams, especially in tough times. But the war on talent is becoming especially fierce. So what can today's leaders do to attract and retain high performers?

In a Hawaii Chamber of Commerce survey of nearly 400 member companies, over 80% of employers reported that they were struggling to find workers to fill open positions.

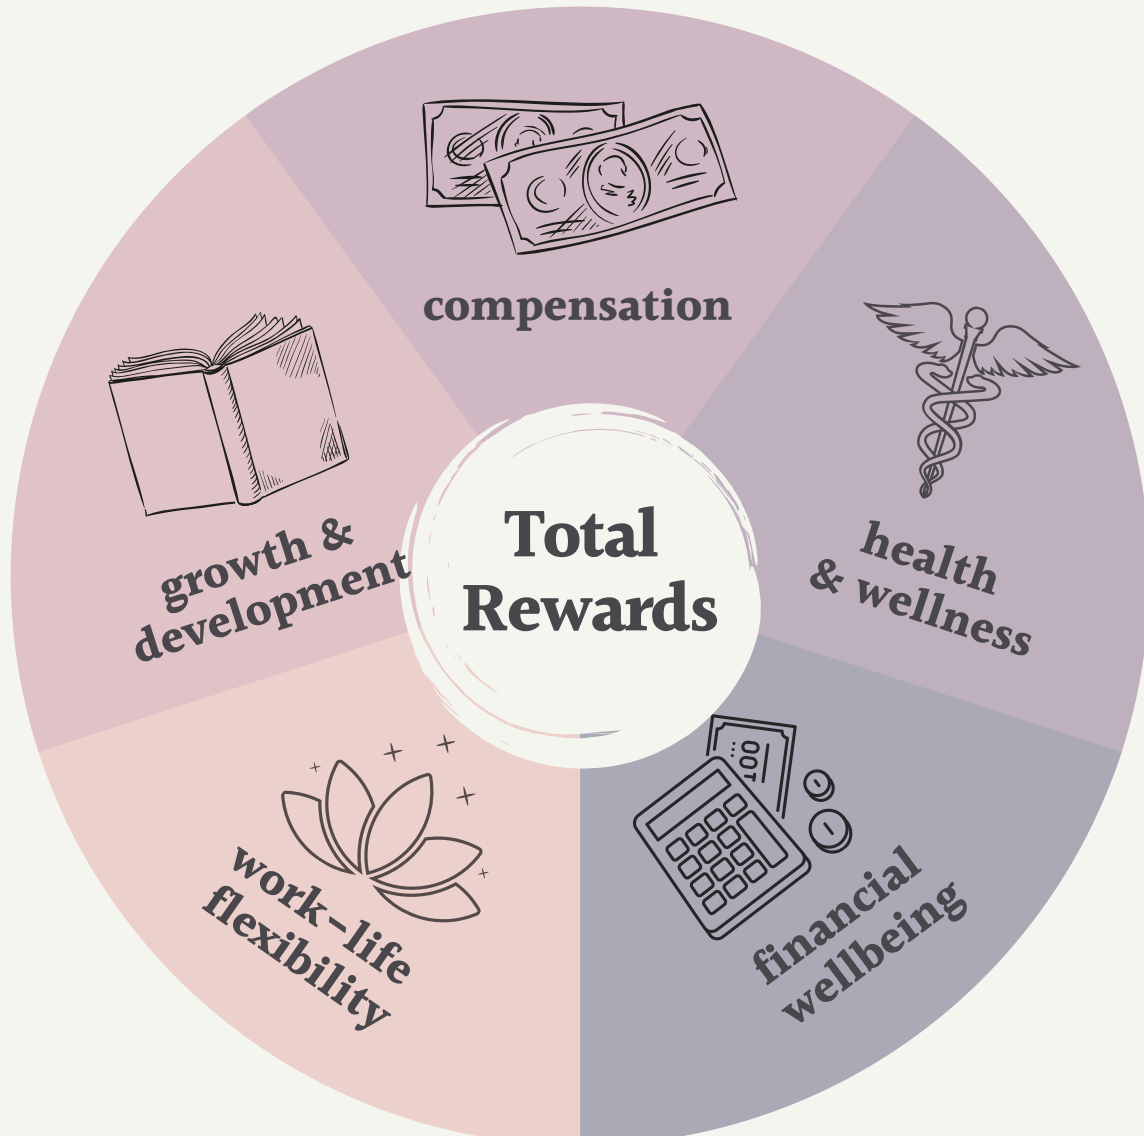

"The value proposition people have regarding work is significantly shifting...to ignore what has happened over the past 14 months would not be smart."

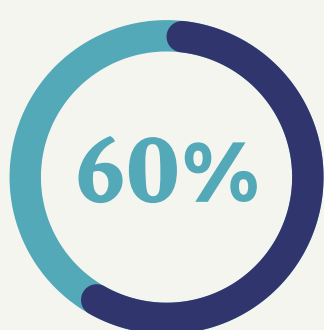

— Korn Ferry

5 Types of Employee Rewards

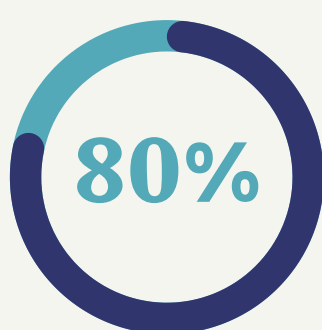

A five part approach to employee rewards is changing the way employers engage employees & improve business outcomes. It's called Total Rewards.

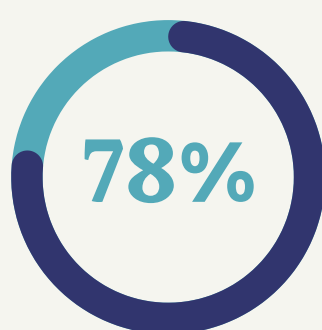

Why It Matters

of people report that benefits and perks are a major factor in considering whether to accept a job offer of employees who can easily access benefits said they feel loyal to their employer of workers would remain with their employer because of the benefits they offer

Get Your Free Guide to Designing Employee Rewards!

Best practices, checklists & more!

GET THE GUIDE

